The Bands: Three different musical groups, each with their unique style and sound, await their turn in the spotlight. Who will emerge as the true musical maestro under Otto's guidance?

The Stakes: As time runs out, parts might have to be sacrificed, making every second truly precious. It's a thrilling race to capture the perfect sound, under the gun and in front of a live audience online.

How It Works

This process begins with each band submitting three songs and subscribing members voting for their favorites. The song with the most votes becomes the song to be recorded. As the session begins, our "Head of A&R" announces the winning song to Otto and the band and then the two hour count down clock begins.

Subscribing members watch the six camera live webcast session and chat with the band via a LIVE CHAT function displayed on the big screen TV in the control room.

The show's cast includes Otto D'Agnolo (aka "The Recording Artist"), production technician Brian Stubblefield as Otto's right hand man, Courtney Sheber as Head of A&R (Artist & Repertoire) in Season #1, KWSS Radio Program Director/On-Air Personality, Dani Cutler as Head of A&R for Season #2 and former Billboard Award Winning Major Market Radio Music Supervisor, Erin Riley as the show's final word on which songs are the best.

In the end, the bands walk away owning 100% of the copyrights to the new recordings. Many have brought these records to market including Lake Havasu's "The Borrowers" and most recently Tempe's "The Hourglass Cats" (both are being featured in Season 2 for TV).

Content for the TV episodes comes from the live webcast recording sessions, rehearsals with the bands, interviews with the musicians and conversations between the cast and crew. Each episode is designed to captivate viewers whom are interested in intellectual pursuits while being entertaining enough for those simply seeking to be entertained.
